The Big Conflict

A big conflict was about to happen between the birds and the beasts. When the two teams came for battle, the bat did not know which team to join.

The birds that did pass him said, "Come with us!" The bat said to them, "I have fur. I am a beast."

In a bit, some beasts that did pass him looked up and said, "Come with us!"

The bat said, "I have wings. I am a bird."

With luck, at the last moment peace was made, and no battle took place. Then the bat came to the birds and did wish to join in the party, but they all turned against him and he had to fly away.

The bat then went to the beasts, but they did not want him. "Ah," said the bat, "I see now. He who is neither one thing nor the other has no friends."

The moral to this fable is: He who is neither one thing nor the other has no friends. Discuss this with a partner and write a practical example of this lesson.
